

“Gallium Appoints New President and Chief Executive Officer”

OTTAWA, CANADA – June 4, 2007, Gallium Visual Systems is pleased to announce the appointment of Ranald McGillis as President and Chief Executive Officer.

Mr. McGillis assumes executive responsibility for Gallium’s long-term strategic development and growth, and for the management and daily operation of its business areas.

Mr. McGillis has more than 23 years experience in the global defence and security industries. McGillis comes to Gallium from Lockheed Martin Canada, where he was Vice-President, Business Development and Government Relations. Previously he was regional Vice-President for xwave responsible for central Canadian operations. During Ranald’s career he also held progressively senior management positions with Computing Devices Canada – now General Dynamics Canada.

“I am pleased to be joining the management team at Gallium. The company presents exciting professional challenges as new opportunities emerge in our key markets. Gallium has exceptional display software products and services and is very close with its customers,” said Mr. McGillis. “I look forward to building on the company’s strong foundation of leading technology and to expanding our market share in the Defence and Air Traffic Management sectors.

Gallium’s products and service offerings are directly applicable to – and can deploy rapidly into – markets related to Defense and Air Traffic Management such as Homeland Security, Information Technology, Geospatial Intelligence, and Training & Simulation.

Mr. McGillis obtained his Bachelor of Engineering from the University of Western Ontario. He is an active member of the Canadian Association of Defence and Security Industries (CADSI). Mr. McGillis resides in rural Ottawa.
